

South Africans tour college

By Ted Hodgkins

A group from South Africa visited Spoke campus Oct. 18 on a tour arranged by the Spoke Club of Cambridge.

Leah Furrer, of the college, is an overseas staff, and the group really seemed to enjoy the tour. They thought the campus was very nice. That was their first tour of Spoke. That was their first tour of Spoke.

After South Africa left their tour, they went to the main building, the woodworking center and the Computer Center.

The group of international and American people from Cape Town was impressed with the Computer Center, they said.

"The building is beautiful, with all of the modern equipment and the fact that it's here in such a beautiful area," said Chris Brown, one of the visitors.

Others from the group included Leah Furrer, who is also pregnant, and a group of people who are interested in the college. They are interested in the college and the people who are working there.

"The people are very nice, and we are very interested in the college and the people who are working there," said Chris Brown.

The group leader, Leah Furrer, said she was impressed with the technical level of the college.

"This is one of the best technical schools I have ever seen. The students are very good, and the equipment is very good."

A group of Cambridge residents will coordinate South Africa's visit to the college, they said.

Bus link survey gets poor response

By Stephen Oliver

A drive to establish a free link between Cambridge College and Cambridge has failed to get a lot of student response.

"It's not as good as it is," said Leah Furrer, head of the Cambridge Transit subcommittee and vice-president of students of the Spoke Student Association, concerning the results from a survey conducted published earlier in Spoke.

"The survey has been very good, but it's really slow," said Leah Furrer. "It's a survey that's not as good as it is, but it's really slow."

Only seven responses had been received by the last day (Oct. 18). The last of responses, Leah said, was the one that was most interesting to her. She said, "The last of responses was the one that was most interesting to her."

"The point, Leah said, is that the survey is not as good as it is, but it's really slow."

Society seeks new members

By Peter Smithwick

The president of the Coquille College chapter of the American Management Society (AMS) would like to see its newest class membership.

After your resignation, explain to the AMS that you are leaving the company and that you are not interested in the AMS.

Drury said the AMS is not a business organization, but a professional organization.

The goal was to get the AMS to Coquille College, and Drury said the AMS is not a business organization, but a professional organization.
